Joseph Warren Keifer : Civil War Regiments from Ohio, 1861-1865 before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Civil War Regiments from Ohio, 1861-1865:

5 of 5 people found the following review helpful. Ohio provided more soldiers than many other Union states By Janet Carroll I bought this book in order to gain information about the regiment in which my great-great uncle served during the Civil War. For those readers who wish to gain factual information about a particular company or regiment, this offers information concerning the officers, where exactly the unit formed, and in which battles they engaged, and the number of men lost at each battle. There were infantry, cavalry, light and heavy artillery and sharpshooter companies. No list of individual soldiers is included. Five Stars By Customer A great reference book 3 of 5 people found the following review helpful. very poor By Margaret Macfarland was hoping for something with more meat in it about the units but really blaa. nothing you can not find in any book very simply wrote would not recommend at all.

In 1860, the state of Ohio had a total population of over 2.3 million people, of which 679,000 were of military age. For the war, the Buckeye state raised 198 infantry regiments, 13 cavalry regiments, 3 cavalry battalions, 1 light artillery regiment, and 25 light artillery batteries. Ohio regiments fought in all theaters and distinguished themselves greatly. 35,475 Ohioans died during the war, of which 11,588 were killed or mortally wounded in combat. 24 Ohio Infantry regiments are listed in William F. Fox's "300 Fighting Regiments" found in Regimental Losses of the American Civil War. The only fighting during the war on Ohio soil occurred during John Hunt Morgan's cavalry raid in 1863. Among the generals born, raised or residing in Ohio before the war, were Ulysses S. Grant, William T. Sherman, Philip H. Sheridan, Don Carlos Buell, George Armstrong Custer, James A. Garfield, Alexander McD. McCook, William S. Rosecrans, Godfrey Weitzel, Jacob D. Cox, George B. McClellan, and several dozen others. After the war, 5 Civil War veterans from Ohio were elected president, including Ulysses S. Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, and William McKinley.
