Pamela Stanfield : Confederate Diaries and Letters before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Confederate Diaries and Letters:

This book contains three diaries as well as various Civil War letters and documents. The first diary was written by Robert H. Wardlaw in 1820 when he was 13 years old and a young scholar and continues until age 18 when he learns of the death of his mother while he was away at school. Robert Wardlaw's ten sons all served the Confederacy and one of those sons, William C. Wardlaw is the author of the other two diaries. William Wardlaw was a captain in Company K of the 2nd SC Rifles, Jenkins Brigade. In addition to daily entries, he logs his locations when letters were sent or received. He writes almost daily of Molly, until he marries Josie. He reports Lincoln's death and the "humiliating ordeal of stacking our arms in the presence of the enemy" at Appomattox Court House. The diaries and letters were transcribed as written, as close to the originals as possible. Some photos are included which provide a realistic view of these fragile pieces of history.

About the Author Pamela Stanfield grew up in Augusta, Georgia and cherishes her Southern heritage. When her family entrusted her with the "Confederate Diaries and Letters" she felt compelled to capture the family history, so originally transcribed the writings in 2001 and had them published for family members. She now wishes to share them with a larger audience and sees the diaries and letters as authentic primary sources for anyone with an interest in Civil War history. A longtime educator, Dr. Stanfield has been honored at local, state, and national levels for her work in the field of education. Her first book, Children I Have Loved, Lessons I Have Learned, was published in 2014 and is based on the experiences she had as an educator both in and out of the school setting. Retirement has provided time for writing, traveling and riding her motorcycle.
