From Praeger : Conflict in Asia: Korea, China-Taiwan, and India-Pakistan before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Conflict in Asia: Korea, China-Taiwan, and India-Pakistan:

Much of the world reaped a peace dividend with the end of the Cold War, yet Asia has seen little reduction in tensions and military spending. Three Cold War era conflicts-those dividing China and Taiwan, North and South Korea, and India and Pakistan-remain unresolved. Other regional powers, as well as the United States, continue to be concerned about these volatile disputes. North Korea's nuclear and long-range missile development, China's opposition to Taiwan's pursuit of independence, and Pakistan's longstanding dispute with India have all received increasing media attention. This is the first volume using a common approach to examine post-Cold War changes in these three volatile dyads. The book's case studies detail the evolution of each country's security policy and its shifting mix of alliances. The authors analyze U.S. interests and discuss how U.S. intervention affects strategic calculations of the conflicted states. This mechanism allows gives the readers a truer understanding of the conflicts and how they interact within the Asian security system in general. Each of the dominant theoretical frameworks of international relations-neo-realism, neo-liberalism, and constructivism-offer crucial insights into this complicated situation.

"[T]his book is one of the very few case studies that examine all three major volatile dyads in Asia within one volume. The book is theoretically and empirically rich with informative figures and tables....[a] substantial contribution to the literature on Asian security and international conflict in general. It should become an interesting and useful reference book for anyone who likes to read about security, conflict and conflict resolution."-Journal of Chinese Political Science
