Philip Haythornthwaite : Napoleon's Commanders (2): c.1809–15 (Elite) (Vol 2) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Napoleon's Commanders (2): c.1809–15 (Elite) (Vol 2):

It has about a page of bibliography dedicated to each but that page does an excellent job at introducing the reader to each. It also has excellent contemporaneous illustrations (BW drawings) on every character. The author could have presented some contemporaneous color paintings of quite a few of these commanders (they are available) but has not and this is the one weakness of the book. However,there are modern color plates of the most famous. Hence for the figure builder and illustrator the book is of some use but only as an introduction.0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Good ReviewBy Dean M.

Motoyama Very brief review of the commanders concerned; of course, you can't expect an in-depth bio for each of the commanders in the space allowed; the illustrations are very clear and well worth the price. 0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. An excellent Osprey book By danny boy Basic text and potted history of the commanders by Haythornthwaite. What truly lifts this book above good are the lively colour drawings by Courcelle.

Osprey's examination of commanders of the Napoleonic Wars (1799-1815). On the Napoleonic battlefield victory or defeat could still depend on the skills, reactions and personalities of individual commanders. Even under a genius such as Napoleon the dispersal of his armies on campaign, and the lack of fast communications, left command and control of the different corps and divisions in the hands of his marshals and generals. This second in a pair of Elite titles describes in concise but colourful detail the careers and personalities of more than two dozen of Napoleon's leading subordinate commanders in the armies of the later Empire, from c1809 to the Hundred Days campaign of 1815. Their individual appearance, and the typical uniforms of a variety of staff officers, are reconstructed in 12 dazzling colour plates.
